

Another theme that we asked the students, who were involved in the research on religious, cultural and social justice clubs, was what advice they would have for their peers in high school. Their advice was really very consistent. It was “Take part in clubs. Step outside of what you are familiar with. Learn about others, from others, with others. And have a great time while you are doing it.” I’ll let you listen for yourselves to the students giving their own peers advice on club participation.
