

Students Learned About Themselves Clip 11 Transcript

Speaker 1: Joining these clubs, what I really learned about myself is that I really want to do something in my future. I'm in grade 12, I want to do something in my future to help people. Like provide change. So being in all these social justice clubs, I realize that it takes a lot of work as a team to make a change. So, I realize that it's the importance of teamwork. And then my passion for trying to make a change. So when I chose a university program for my future career I steered myself toward those types of studies.

Speaker 2: I've learned that I have a passion for helping other people. And I've learned to put what other people need over myself. So I think I've, it's caused me to be less selfish and think of the bigger picture.

Speaker 1: what I learned about myself in these clubs is that I feel like I have a really good passion to try and contribute to society and make a change. So normally, before I joined all these clubs I knew I wanted to help but I never knew I had such a strong passion for it. So I kind of aimed, like in grade 12, for choosing universities, I steered myself toward looking for profession, maybe future studies that would allow me to make changes to the world. I also learned that teamwork, like I need to be able to work in a team in order to be able to make change because one person can't make a big enough change. You need to work in a big group, a collective group with a goal in mind so that you can at least make a dent in a big issue.
